

Books

The World That Trade Created: Society, Culture, and the World Economy, 1400 - the Present (by Kenneth Pomeranz and Steven Topik, Armonk, NY: M. E. Sharpe, 2001)

The book is a collection of short columns about global economic issues that the authors have written over the years for World Trade magazine; the columns deal with everything from the Fujian Trade Diaspora, to the Euro currency, to the story of guano (manure from the sea birds off the coast of Peru). The brevity of the articles (usually one or two pages) and their highly readable nature make the book well-suited for high school students. The book is especially useful for world history, world studies, and macroeconomics teachers because it takes complex ideas and presents them in a relevant and entertaining way.

The Debt Game (A simulation game: Christian Aid)

Discover how easy it is to accumulate huge debts despite making every effort to sell your produce. This game begins to explore the complex issues of international debt and demonstrates the difficulties experienced by a nation in balancing its books when financial control is maintained by powerful international organisations. Playing time approx 80 minutes. For 15-30 players. Age 14+.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

The Trading Game (A simulation game: Christian Aid)

This simulation game helps players understand the basic principles of international trade and shows how the gap between rich and poor countries can be maintained and widened by trading systems. Playing time approx 90 minutes. For 15 to 30 players. Age 14+.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

Explorations of Global Issues (VIDEA)

This resource weaves together four current issues (Gender, Food Security, Consumerism, Environment) explored in teacher-directed and student-centred activities.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

OXFAM Campaigner (OXFAM Canada, 2000)

Special issue on sweatshops.

(Available for download from OXFAM Canada: <http://www.oxfam.ca/education/index.htm>)

Globalisation: Who is in Charge of Our Future? (CO-DEVELOPMENT CANADA)

A Secondary Teacher's Resource. This resource enables teachers to provide their students with an overview of what globalisation is and how it affects people in Canada and in the developing world.

The lesson plans and activities encourage critical thinking on the part of the students, viewing the global economy from different perspectives such as business, governments and community.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

Sweatshops: Clothes, the real cost of the clothes you buy (VIDEA, 1999)

This booklet examines who makes the clothes we wear, looking behind the labels to the realities of the most globalized industry in the evolving global economy.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

Barbie's Trip around the World: Globalisation in the Toy Industry (VIDEA, 2000)

This booklet looks at child labour, the unhealthy and dangerous working conditions which are common place in the international toy industry.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

Behind the Swoosh (VIDEA, 2000)

This booklet looks at the working conditions in the overseas shoe factories. More than any other company, Nike has been criticized for using Third World Sweatshops to make its products.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

Challenging McWorld (by Tony Clarke and Sarah Dopp, Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives, 2001)

This book is designed to enable concerned youth to develop skills required for confronting McWorld in their daily lives on several fronts. "McWorld" is the symbolic term used to capture the new realities of corporate-driven globalisation which engulf young people today.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

The No-Nonsense Guide to Fair Trade (by David Ransom, New Internationalist, 2001)

The threads of a complex issue are pulled together into a summary of key concepts and factual evidence – a lively, digestible and radical guide for the general reader as well as campaigners and specialists in development, globalisation and international affairs.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

The No-Nonsense Guide to Globalisation (by Wayne Ellwood, New internationalist, 2001)

This guide traces the journey towards a 'borderless' world. And in the process it shows that the promise of globalisation is seductive, powerful – and ultimately hollow.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)

The Coffee Chain Game (Oxfam UK, 1994)

This is an activity about where coffee comes from, how it gets on the supermarket shelves and how it affects the lives of the people who grow it.

(Available from WIAM: 238-4659)