

VIDEOS

Banana Split

A film by Ronald Harpelle & Kelly Saxberg; Canada; Louis Paquin of Les Productions Rivard

"Banana Split" is a one-hour documentary about the banana industry and the lives of people who produce, market and consume the fruit. It offers a social analysis of the most popular fruit in Canada looking at its voyage from the plantations to our super market shelves.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Breaking the Bank

74 Min.

After the Seattle victory that stopped the World Trade Organization in its "fast" tracks, thousands converged on Washington D.C. to challenge the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank at their meeting in April, 2000. Videomakers from the Independent Media Center were on the spot to provide the non-corporate coverage you won't find anywhere else.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Cola-colonization [videorecording] : Coca-Cola's unquenchable thirst for global dominance

Produced by DLI Productions in association with Channel Four, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Télé-Québec. Montréal, Québec : DLI Productions, c1998.(51 min.)

Tea spills in China, wine in France and blood in Guatemala, as Coca-Cola teaches the world to acquire a taste for "The Real Thing". But as Coke - and Pepsi - are busy abroad conquering new markets, upstart colas are nipping at their heels back home. From the jungle of Papua New Guinea to the "Coca-Cola Olympics" in Atlanta, we see the globalisation of American pop culture, and corporate influence on the souls of nations.

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH05753)

Coffee with a Conscience

CBC Marketplace. 2000.

This documentary looks at the coffee industry from the viewpoint of the local farmer, the purchaser and the consumer. Fair trade coffee is analyzed as an alternative coffee product, offering the local farmer better return for their coffee harvest.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Common Grounds: Giving Coffee a New Flavour

1998, 52 Min

This film promotes the concept of fair trade in coffee, whereby growers in places such as Chiapas, Mexico, have established co-operatives to pool resources and ensure that they command a fairer price for their coffee. The consumer has an important role to play in forcing change and equity in global trading par.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Economics: Reinventing the World Series

Asterisk Film and Video, 2001 (approx 50 min)

This dismal science comes alive in the wake of the summit of the Americas, where questions raised by protests in Quebec City, Seattle and Davos get provocative responses and bring the issues home to our own households.

(Available at the Ottawa Public Library)

Economix Series

National Film Board of Canada, 1996. (4 videos, each approx 30 min.)

Volume 1 explores how human needs and wants, along with a finite amount of resources, have resulted in the development of "The Market," in which supply and demand influence pricing, revenue, and profit. Volume 2 looks at production and consumption. Volume 3 examines the banking system and the role of government. Finally, Volume 4 offers a perspective on the global economy, free trade, and international competition.

(For more information see: <http://www.umanitoba.ca/cm/vol7/no15/economix.html>)

The Emperor's New Clothes, A Cautionary Tale of Free Trade

NFB, The short English version, 53 Min 5 Sec.

Filmed in Canada, the United States and Mexico over a three year period, this provocative documentary immerses itself in the stark reality of life before, during and after the signing of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). It takes an incisive look at the profound effects that economic agreements between big business and government can have on human lives, including increased cuts to social programs, massive unemployment, environmental damage, and demoralization.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Global capitalism and the moral imperative / [videorecording]

Princeton, NJ: Films for the Humanities, 1998. (29 min.)

In the rising tide of the global economy, moral leaders warn that global "laissez-faire" is producing consequences similar to those of the 19th century, when gaps between rich & poor kept thousands in abject poverty for generations. In this new era of social Darwinism, moral leaders are asking who in the world community will care for the needs of the poor, and how it will be accomplished. If economic and political reforms are necessary...who will initiate them and how [will they be enforced].

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH05594)

The Global Marketplace: The Benefits of Globalisation

2001, 30 Min.

Many people around the world believe a keen business sense is not incompatible with a social conscience. Although the '60's may have come and gone, some of the values that emerged in those times are making themselves felt in corporate boardrooms. The baby boomer generation, which since adolescence has set the tenor of the times, influences the age of globalisation by struggling to persuade the people with the purse strings to set ethical investment policies and corporate codes of conduct.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Global Pillage

CLC, 17 Min. 17 Sec.

This film looks at how multi-national corporations operate across borders, with specific reference to the Toy Industry and Health and Safety Issues. Available both in English and in French.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Global Village or Global Pillage

How People Around the World are Challenging Corporate Globalisation

26 Min. 46 Sec.

This film describes how people around the world are challenging corporate globalisation.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)

Globalisation [videorecording] : winner[s] and losers

Princeton, NJ: Films for the Humanities & Sciences, c2000. (42 Minutes)

Sabeer Bhatia, inventor of Hotmail, Narayan Murthy, founder of Infosys, and other industry leaders attest globalisation has raised the standard of living in developing economies through high-tech opportunities, foreign investment, and debt relief. Harvard's Jeffrey Sachs and other experts point out that the world market is being exploited through short-sightedness. This program addresses the pros and cons of doing business in the global marketplace.

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH06167)

International production relocation [videorecording]

Narrated by Jean-Marc Pissatia; researched by Dany Chedeville and directed by Chris Gandjbakhch ; produced by Gulliver Education. Chicago: CLEARVUE / eav, c1998. (9 min.)

In today's booming global economy there remains a sharp divide between wealthy, industrialized nations and poor, less developed ones. The lower standard of living in poor nations provides them with an accidental asset: a low wage workforce, attractive to multinational corporations seeking to cut costs. It remains to be seen whether the trend toward production relocation will spark economic development around the globe, or create a downward wage spiral that will impact workers in all countries, rich and poor.

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH06237)

In The Balance

Television Trust for the Environment; 24 Min., English Mix Version

This film looks at the struggles that third world countries endure to pay off their international debt. Specific focus is places on Mozambique and how its citizens are affected by debt.

(Available at the Ottawa Public Library: V330.9 T581)

Mass media in society [videorecording]

Producer, David P. Stone; produced in cooperation with the College Division of the McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. and Knowledge TV. Princeton, NJ: Films for the Humanities & Sciences, [1998] (28 min.)

"The world is quickly becoming saturated with information, entertainment, and advertisements. In this program, academic and industry experts examine the globalisation of information exchange, the way in which it has altered the social distance between nations and individuals, and the future of mass media. In the U.S., viewers watch an average of 4.5 hours per day of television, willingly lending their eyes and ears to advertisers. However, the 1990s have seen a growing fragmentation of America into demographically segmented audiences, driven by niche programming and narrow-interest advertising. The enthusiasm for interactive communication is growing, spurred on by the desire for news and entertainment tailored and delivered on demand and the possibilities of one-to-one marketing. Is the concept of mass media on the verge of extinction?"

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH05853)

News in review, 2002, February [videorecording]

Host, Knowlton Nash; writer, Mark Harrison; executive producer, Arnold Amber; associate producer, Lou Kovacs. Toronto: CBC Non-Broadcast Sales, c2002. (59 min.).

ARGENTINA: COLLAPSE OF AN ECONOMY: After years of turmoil, Argentina, formerly one of South America's healthiest economies, collapsed after defaulting on its national debt of US$144-billion. The crisis brought down a number of interim Argentinean government leaders, created violent protests in the streets, which killed more than 30 people, and seriously devalued the Argentinean currency. This tragic case study of the breakdown of a national economy is the starting point for a study of many important global economic policies and systems.

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH06956)

Tilt

National Film Board of Canada, 1994 (approx 20 min.)

An animated film exposition of what is wrong with our world and how a little more sharing of wealth on the part of the "have" countries might ease the world's economic ills. The world is compared to the ball in a pin ball machine bouncing this way or that according to how it is manipulated.

(Available at the Ottawa Public Library: V330.9 T581)

Trade off [videorecording]

Thomas Lee Wright; directed by Shaya Mercer; [Mercer Island, Wash.] : Wright Angle Media, c2000; 90 min

This documentary tells the story of the World Trade Organization's first meeting on U.S. soil in Seattle on November 29 through December 3, 1999, which was met with protests of tens of thousands of people from a broad coalition of diverse communities.

(Available at the University of Ottawa Library: MRT Audiovisual VH06620)

Turbulence

NFB, 52 Min.

The global market is not a neutral territory, but an unprecedented state of interconnections and interdependence. Circling the globe, director Carole Poliquin meets squatters in Paris, families living on welfare in Quebec, factory workers in Thailand, teachers in Ontario, fish processors in Senegal and debt-ridden Mexicans. She also interviews some of the market speculators and fund managers who help dictate economies worldwide and yet, for the most part, remain indifferent to the consequences of their actions.

(Available from the WIAM library: wia@web.net)